*Restorative Justice practices bring people together;
people together make new futures possible.*

Victim Offender Dialogue (VOD) is a process in which victims of a crime (or their family members) and an offender meet in a safe and secure setting. Though this may not be for every situation, the experience of talking directly with a person who committed violence or violation can enable survivors to give voice to the pain they have experienced.

Brenda Nolan, chair of the Restorative Justice Task Team will offer a welcome and Rev. Sam Lovett will offer a brief background on Restorative Justice. Martina Lutz Schneider, director of the VOD program at the Ahimsa Collective will share an overview of VOD concepts. Liz McNenny will tell about her experience of a victim-offender dialogue after the murder of her brother.
